OBJETIVOS GERAIS This course aims to explore the notion of the “Right to the City,” a concept developed in the 1960s and that has affected the way cities are managed and governed ever since. The notion of “the right to the city” will be explored as it has evolved conceptually and as it has manifested, either explicitly or implicitly, in urban policies and practices in cities and regions worldwide over the past few decades. The course also aims to provide the students with an inventory of recent developments in research and policy practice and, finally, explore the potential theoretical and practical limitations to the “right to the city” concept.
OBJETIVOS ESPECÍFICOS Students will gain an understanding on the following issues: 1. The origin, evolution and variation of the “right to the city” concept; 2. The political struggles underlying the formation of the urban agenda; 3. Potentialities and limitations of the “right to the city” discourse; 4. The rights and policies encompassed in the “right to the city” concept.
